Dear Customer

Although the economic recovery is still fragile and it is widely acknowledged that the coming year will not be without its challenges for the industry, the future for construction is not all doom and gloom and there are signs of growth and stimulated commercial opportunities in some sectors.

However, recovery is still very fragile, inflation is running at its highest levels in recent years and the metal market prices are unstable, with up to 20% increases. This is reflected by the following increases notified by our suppliers.

Within these challenging market conditions, SIG remain committed to maintaining the high levels of quality and customer service and we will endeavour to do all we can to lessen the impact as we go forward
